The demand upon our columns for advertising space certainly shows that business men recognize the value of "The Columbian" as an advertising medium.

VOL 29 BLOOMSBURG, PA., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1894. NO 46

THE NORMAL SOHOOL.

Some idea of the size and consequent requirements of the Bloomsburg Normal School may be gathered from the steward's recent report to an interested inquirer who put it in print as follows:

One hundred and twenty loaves of bread and from 30 to 35 pounds of butter are consumed daily. One hundred and eighty pounds of beef make a roast for dinner. Five bushels of apples are used to make the sauce for a meal. Mr. Housel showed us the milk bill for October. We were astonished to find that 3,430 quarts had been used in a single month.

Nine boiled hams averaging 16 pounds each furnish enough cold meat for supper, while 65 pounds of sausage goes for breakfast. Thirty gallons of soup, 15 gallons of coffee 4 bushels of potatoes and 40 pounds of cheese were items in a single meal. It took 15 gallons of oysters for a stew last night.

Murder occurred at Pittston on the 12th inst., by a 17-year-old boy deliberately shooting his mother, who died soon after. He was captured and jailed.

The murderer, Henry Martin, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Martin. His brother in-law, who lives with the family, returned from a drive and as the horses were muddy and hot, he told young Henry to clean them. The two have not been good friends for some time and Henry replied that he did not have to clean the horses and he had better not order him around. Powell replied: "If you do not behave yourself and clean those horses right away, I'll tell your father, and he will give you a sound thrashing. You need one, anyhow; it will do you good."

A few more words ensued, the boy becoming angrier, until at last he called Powell a vile name, Powell then struck him on the head several times with his open hand and the boy screaming with rage shouted: "I,ll blow your head off for that," and ran into the house. His mother, hearing the noise of the quarrel, went into the yard and was talking with Powell when her son rushed out with his rifle, a flobert, in his hand. He raised it to his shoulder and took deliberate aim at Powell, who was but twenty feet away. The mother, with a cry of horror, sprang before the latter crying, "Don't shoot, you do not know what you are doing." "Yes I do," he replied angrily, "and if you don't step aside, I'll shoot you."

His mother advanced toward him, pleading with him to put down the gun, but he calmly aimed at her head, and when she was about ten feet away he fired. The ball entered just below the right ear, and pierced the brain, and with a moan of pain she fell to the ground.

Unaffected by the sight of his dying mother, the boy clubbed his rifle and rushed at Powell, swinging the weapon at his head with all his strength. Powell avoided the blow and grappling with the young murderer disarmed him. By this time, the father and other members of the family were on the spot and some neighbors who heard the cries and the shot summoned the officers.

When the policemen appeared, the father of the family was raising the dying mother from the ground, while the others were standing around weeping. The boy was alone in a corner, sullen and apparently unaffected. He was arrested and jailed. Physicians who were summoned could do nothing for the injured woman and she died soon after the shooting.

OPERA HOUSE.

Next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, The American Players will produce three strong and powerful plays. Monday night, Dunma's masterpiece, The Count of Monte Cristo. Tuesday, La Flirtation or Led Astray. Another great play from the French. Wednesday night, Oliver Twist. The company include such well known people as Mr. Frank Karington, Mr. Joseph Ransome, Mr. Le-Martin, Miss Mary Le-Vere, Miss Dora Vinton and others of equal standing. The management have arranged the prices at 25, 35 and 50 cents, so as to give every one a chance to see this excellent organization.

A BANQUET.

The Knights of the Golden Eagle of Bloomsburg, will give a banquet to Grand Chief C. B. Wood, of Philadelphia, immediately after the close of his school of instructions on Wednesday evening November 28th, at the White House Restaurant.

A GOOD CITIZEN GONE.

Mr. Philip Unangst, who was stricken with paralysis on Saturday evening last, died on Thursday morning at 8 o'clock. His death was as peaceful as his life was regular and even.

Thus passes away one of Bloomsburg's oldest and best citizens, who has lived in the town for nearly sixty years. Came here a young man of 21 and has grown up with the town.

He was a faithful member of the Lutheran church from the time he came. Being of rugged health he was never missing at any of her services. For 30 consecutive years he was Secretary of the Sunday School and for many years an elder in the church. His place was never vacant either in church, Sunday school or prayer meeting. Since his retirement from the Secretary's office in Sunday school, three years ago, he occupied a chair beside the Superintendent's platform which was always filled. He held a number of positions of trust in the community, one of which was Treasurer of the Cemetery company, and not a grave has been located in the new cemetery without his direction. The beginning of his last sickness dates to the locating of a grave in the heavy snow of last spring, since which time he has been compelled to walk with a cane.

The community loses one of its best citizens, the church one of its truest and most faithful members, the Sunday School a life long friend and worker, and his home a fond father and a prudent head. To his wife and children we extend our sympathies. There are three children living, George and Mary, who are yet at home, and Charles, a prominent attorney in New York, all of whom were by his bedside when he passed away. The funeral will take place on Saturday at 2 o'clock.

Catholic Sisters May Teach.

Supreme Court Affirms the Lower Court's Decision in the Gallitzin Case.

In the case of John Hysong et al. vs. the school district of Gallitzin borough et al. better known as the "Gallitzin school case," the supreme court at Pittsburg on Monday affirmed the decision of the lower court. Justice Dean, in delivering the majority opinion, says in part: "This bill was filed to restrain the school directors of Gallitzin borough from permitting sectarian teaching in the common schools of the borough, and from employing as teachers, sisters or members of the Order of St. Joseph, a religious society of the Roman Catholic church.

"In the sixty years of existence of our present school system this is the first time the court has been asked to decide, as a matter of law, that it is sectarian teaching for a devout woman to appear in a school room in a new dress peculiar to a religious organization of a Christian church. We decline to do so; the law does not say so. After a most careful consideration we see nothing of merit in any of the assignments of error. The decree is affirmed and appeal dismissed at the cost of appellants." Justice Williams handed down the minority dissenting opinion.

THAT SUPPER.

The chicken and waffle supper given by the ladies of the Lutheran church last Friday evening was a marked success in every respect, the net gain being something over $50. The ladies were vigilant, their tables were tastily arranged, their edibles healthful and appetizing, their location favorable, their charges reasonable and their chicken a little scarce toward the last. However, the crowd was more to blame than the ladies for this, and what may have been wanting in chicken was amply supplied in waffles served in good style.

ELLA CLEMANTINE RODGERS.

A mass Temperance meeting has been arranged for under the auspices of the Pastor's Union for Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the Presbyterian Church. There will be a lecture by Miss Ella Clemantine Rodgers, of New York, author of the Cloverleaf Pledge Movement that has met with marked success in many of the cities east and west. Miss Rodgers has many glowing testimonials as a lecturer and was formerly employed as State lecturer of the New York State Temperance Union.

The Bloomsburg Gold Cure Sanitarium has certainly performed some wonderful cures of the liquor, opium and morphine habits. Dr. I. W. Willits, the manager, has just issued a neat circular containing testimonials from many of the patients who have been treated there successfully. Any one desiring information on the subject, should write him.

THE SHERIFF ELECT.

J. BOYD MCHENRY.

We present to our readers this week the pleasant and familiar features of J. Boyd McHenry, sheriff-elect of Columbia county. He is a resident of Benton, and one of the most popular men in that township. In fact, he is popular wherever he is known. He is the proprietor of the McHenry House, and is a married man. He will be sworn into office on the first Monday in January.

Free Sugar for Hungarians.

A derailed Lehigh Valley freight train scattered a lot of protected sugar along the track recently, and the Hungarian workmen near at hand removed the protective duty temporarily and just helped themselves to as much as they could carry in bags. But it is not likely that this stolen taste of free sugar will affect either their politics or religion.

The strongest nation on earth numerically is China, whose population in the absence of a census is rated all the way from 400 to 600 million. And at the same time she is the weakest nation on earth when it comes to the matter of self defense, as is clearly demonstrated by the repeated defeats she has suffered from the commencement of her war with Japan whose population is but 40 millions.

The smoker of the Monday morning train en route to Bloomsburg smoked too much. It somehow caught fire from the stovepipe, and, being discovered in time, the soothing and historic waters of Fishing Creek were punctually applied and they soon quenched the fire and allayed the anxiety of the passengers. Fishing Creek is a historic stream.

Mrs. A. Long, an aged and respected lady of New Columbus, died at the home of her son J. F. Long, at half past 3 o'clock on Sunday morning. She had been sick for some time with heart disease. Her affectionate son will miss her motherly influence and mourn her loss.

After considerable suffering from a sense of suffocation, not being able to either sit or lie down, Mr. J. Martin Hulshiser, a respected citizen of Light Street, died on Sunday last at 8 o'clock, P. M. He died intestate, leaving an affectionate wife but no children to mourn his loss.

A spirited game of foot-ball was played on Saturday afternoon between the second team of the Normal School and another recently organized in town. The score, 16 to nothing, in favor of the Normal would rather indicate that the school boys must practice some at recess.

For quick work, bring your job printing, to this office. Five skillful job printers devote all their time to that department. The present indications are that the force will have to be increased, to keep up with the orders that are constantly coming in.

The New York Flats Company, billed for last Friday night, did not reach here, and nothing has been heard from them since. It is said that they stranded at Sunbury.

Invitations have been issued to the marriage of Miss Annie Quick and Harry W. Deily, on Thursday afternoon, November 22d. at the home of the bride in Rupert, Pa.

Oscar Yost, of Shenandoah, Pa., will shortly remove to Bloomsburg, where he intends to locate. Mr. Yost has been a resident of the former place for more than 25 years.—Jeweler's Circular.

ME AND MARY.

There's a lot o' joy in livin', an' a lot o' fun in life,
When a feller has a sweetheart an' is thinkin' o' a wife,
An' that kinder now reminds me that I lived on honey comb
When Mary did the milkin' an' I drove the cattle home.

I was kinder shy an' bashful, an' what folks would say was "green,"
An' the writin' in the Bible put down Mary "seventeen,"
I'd been thinkin' of the city—bein' much inclined to roam,
But I wondered, if I left her, who would drive the cattle home?

But there was'nt so much in farmin', or in drivin' cows to milk;
It kept me down to cotton jeans an' Mary fur from silk;
An' so, though I was up to go—for leavin' of the loam,
As I said before, I wondered, who would drive the cattle home?

You see, they kinder knowed me—been a-drivin' of 'em so!
An' Mary had to milk 'em at a certain time—you know!
Would they come up in the twilight, would they know the time o' stars!
An' who, like me, could coax 'em, an' let down for 'em the bars?

I remember, it was springtime—'bout the settin' o' the sun;
An' I drove the cows to Mary, an' the milkin' had begun;
An' I said: "I'm sorry, Mary, that the two of us must part,"
An' I kept a-whistlin', careless, like 'twould break nobody's heart.

But she looked across the meadows, with her blue an' beamin' eyes,
Which was like a dream o' heaven, an' jest took in all the skies!
An' then—an' then—I can't tell how—I couldn't think or see—
"Do you like the city livin', or the cattle, more than me?"

Warn't no milk in that ere farmhouse that evenin'—not a drop;
The cows got in the cornfield an' jest eat up half the crop;
But the dish that I was feedin' from was sweet with honey-comb
From the red, sweet lips o' Mary, as I kissed her goin' home!

I lost sight o' the city life, whatever it might be;
One acre in the country was enough, an' more, for me!
An' I've made my mind up certain, an' I ain't inclined to roam,
While Mary does the milkin' an' I drive the cattle home! —Frank L. Stanton.

"QUEEN ELEANOR."

"Is there very much more of this climbing, Mr. Elverton? I don't really think I can keep on much longer." And Lena Wolmer leaned up against a rock, and panted for breath, as she looked at her companion, a handsome young man of five or six and twenty, whose sunburnt features took on a deeper flush beneath his broad-brimmed felt hat while he answered penitently:

"Miss Walmer, I'm awfully sorry; but I thought we should have been on the top an hour ago. I really did, I assure you; and I am beginning to be afraid I have altogether miscalculated the distance somehow."

"Are you quite sure this dreadful mountain has a top?" asked Miss Wolmer. "For my part, I have very considerable doubts on the subject. Or perhaps"—she went on, with a laugh—"the trouble is that Mr. Elverton does not know how to find it? Come, Mr. Elverton, confess you have lost the way. Your easy manner does not deceive me in the least, and I have been quite convinced for some time that you were off the track; so you may as well make an open disclosure of your errors. What is the good of going on, up, and up, and up, and never apparently getting any nearer the end of our journey?"

The young planter looked somewhat abashed as he replied: "I have observed that as a general rule if one continues to go up a hill, one comes to the top some time or other. This mountain, however, I am bound to admit, seems fated to prove the opposite. In fact, as you very neatly put it, either Hantana has no top at all or else——" He paused, and met the merry sparkle in Miss Wolmer's eyes with a like twinkle in his own.

"Yes, Mr. Elverton?"

"Well, or else I don't know how to get there. Now the whole story is out, Miss Lena, and it only remains for you to crush me with your scorn."

"Then you have lost the road! Oh, this is truly delicious!" cried Lena, clapping her hands. "What will Harry say, when he hears? You remember how he scoffed last night when you proposed the expedition: 'Nonsense! Take a lady through that jungle. It can't be done; the thing is perfectly preposterous, and not to be thought of.' He will never let us hear the end of this morning's work, I am afraid, Mr. Elverton."

"Me, you mean. He can't throw any contempt on your shoulders, Miss Lena. It is all my fault you have not seen the sun rise from the top of Hantana; and I shall never cease to be humiliated when I think of it. However, don't let us dwell on our ignoble failure any longer. Suppose we throw the thing up now, and go no farther? I can see you are fatigued; and you have done enough, anyway, already for the honor and glory of your sex; for I am quite sure no woman—no English woman, at least—was ever so far up the steep sides of Hantana. Besides, the sun is growing hot, and it will soon be almost dangerous for you to be out in it. Even as it is, we shall have a scorching going back to our horses, unless I am much mistaken."

"Well," assented Miss Wolmer, "I should not have liked to make the proposal myself, for I always hate to be the first to give in; but since you have owned to your sins so honestly, I don't mind confessing on my side that I've had quite enough of Ceylon mountaineering to last me for the rest of my life. Creepers and tree-fern are lovely to look at; but when it comes to struggling up hill through the jungle, I think I prefer the less picturesque vegetation of my native land. I must really have a rest before we begin the descent, Mr. Elverton."

"Are you so very tired, then?" asked Tom Elverton, looking at her anxiously. "I shall never forgive myself, Miss Lena, if you are the worse for this mad exploit. I cannot forget it was I who proposed it. See—here is a stone that looks pretty comfortable. Do you think you could manage to get a little rest on it, while I go along this ridge a bit, and see if I can't find you an orange or two? I think I can make out some native huts down in yon hollow, and there are always ile of the land, too; there must be an man's garden. I'll have a look at the oranges or plantains in the Singalese easier way down, you know, for I have evidently got off the track, somehow, coming up."

"Very well," replied Lena. "Go, by all means, Mr. Elverton; and may every success attend you. I shall be glad if we can get back without passing through that scarlet lantana again; for, though it is so beautiful, I shall not soon forget how it can scratch one's face and hands. But don't be vexed with yourself for bringing me here. I wanted to come just as much as you wanted to take me, and though I am just a little tired now, the whole trip has been delightful so far. I don't believe, moreover, the sunrise could have possibly been any grander from the top than from the point we saw it. The view of those waves of mist rolling off these great peaks was magnificent, and well worth all our toil; so do not think for a moment I regret our expedition, Mr. Elverton, though in a certain sense it has been a failure."

"It is like you to say so," responded Tom, gratefully. "All the same, I feel I have disgraced myself. I was I feel I have disgraced myself. I was so cock-sure I could find the way. I wouldn't even bring a coolie with us. If I had, we should never have got into this mess. But," continued the young planter, in a lower tone, as he arranged Lena's shawl on the rock, and poked about with his stick to make sure no hidden snake or venomous spider would share her resting-place, "you must remember what a temptation it was to me to have you all to myself for a few hours."

Lena Wolmer's cheeks flushed, but she made no reply; and Tom, after lingering for a moment or two, as if expecting her to answer, went off, as he said," to explore."

The young lady watched him disappear round the end of the next rock, and then turned to feast her eyes on the prospect before her. Away below lay Kandy, the lovely little mountain capital of Ceylon, its white houses and red-tiled roofs already shining in the morning's sunbeams; and between her and them the waters of the lake gleamed through the sago-palms and cocoanut trees; while, far away to the left, she could catch a sparkle here and there of the broad Mahawelliganga flowing silently to its ocean home, past the dark-green coffee estates and the lighter-tinted paddy-fields. Nearer, the sun shone on miles of tea plantations, with here and there the picturesque bungalow of a planter, or a row of native huts, which Lena had already learned to call "lines." Amongst them all, she easily recognized the clump of trees in the midst of which stood her brother's bungalow, and her own present home.

Lena was a fresh arrival in Ceylon. A good many years younger than her only brother, the clever, long-headed proprietor of Duemalla estate, she had spent her orphan girlhood at a London boarding school, and hardly ever remembered that she and her brother, except when his annual letter, containing the draft to pay her fees, brought him to her mind. But there were just these two left out of their family; he, the eldest, and she, the youngest; and when her school days were done, there seemed nothing else for her to do but to go out and join him in his far-off home. Harry Wolmer was not greatly delighted. He had a poor opinion of women generally, and looked forward to his sister's arrival as a disagreeable event that could not be prevented. However, when she came he was very kind to her, and endured with wonderful patience the invasion of his old bachelor privacy by all the young fellows round about, who came like bees to a sugar-bowl, as soon as the district learned that Wolmer's sister had appeared.

The proprietor of Duemalla had really something to endure; his front veranda was besieged by ardent youths, who came uninvited to breakfast, tiffin and dinner, and hung over the new mistress of the bungalo, listening to her conversation as if she were inspired, accompanying her songs on their violins, or bringing her the skins of all sorts of wild animals which they had shot, and snipe, which they implored her to have cooked for her dinner; while the back veranda was equally crowded with their horse-keepers, snoring comfortably in shady corners, or chewing the social betelnut in the intervals of discussing their master's character. However, Mr. Wolmer bore it all with great good nature, and only inquired now and then of Lena when the wedding was to be, and which of all her adorers was the man of her choice.

Lena on her part enjoyed her position immensely. It was a new thing to her to be so courted and admired; and, though she was sorry for the unfortunates whom she was constantly rejecting, her head was perhaps just a trifle turned by all the admiration she received. One very wealthy Scotchman paid her special attention, and she had determined to marry him. When he asked her, she would accept him, though she liked Tom Elverton best. But Tom was only a poor S. D., or "little master," as the Tamils say. In other words, he was simply Mr. Wolmer's assistant, and had not a penny beyond his salary. And Lena, who had been poor all her life, did not feel inclined to go on in poverty, when luxury and riches were within her reach. So Tom had been rejected, like the other ten or eleven adorers who had offered themselves to Miss Wolmer; but he still came about the bungalow, though he had no hope in his heart. He could not bear to stay away, somehow; and yesterday, when Lena had expressed a wish to see the sun rise from Hantana, he had been lifted up into the seventh heaven of joy when she accepted his offer of himself as a guide.

To tell the truth, Lena was specially sorry for Tom; and though she was quite resolved not to marry him, she could not resist making him as happy as she was able, in the meantime. Her eyes got dewy now, as she thought of him and his tender care of her all the way up. "Poor Tom!" she mused. "I wonder why the nicest people are always the ones that have no money? Now, if I had money, or he had been rich, we might have been happy together. But then it is not to be thought of, Lena, my dear. A girl with ten pounds a year to her fortune can't marry a man with nothing a year for his, that's certain; and Harry says the same; so there's nothing for it but Mr. Alexander MacAlpine, though Mrs. Alexander MacAlpine sounds dreadful compared with——"

But Lena did not finish her thoughts. The long rest after exertion, combined with the heat, was beginning to make her drowsy. The rustle of the leaves of a palm-tree near, as they flapped backwards and forwards in the breeze sounded in her ears like the distant wash of the ocean, and she fancied herself back on board ship, lying in her berth, and listening to the lapping of the water against the side of the vessel. Then she was at school, and the governess was speaking to her, and telling her to wake up. "Yes, Miss Martin," she tried to say, and struggled to lift her heavy eyelids, while Miss Martin seemed to stare at her with a strangely stony look.

At last, with a great effort, she opened her eyes. There facing her, and just rearing its head to strike, sat a large snake. His beautiful glossy skin shone in the bright sun, and his eyes were fixed on her. Lena uttered a sound—voice and tongue alike failed her; and helpless, almost paralyzed with terror, she sat looking at the horrible creature, not daring even to breathe, lest he should make the fatal spring. Afterwards, she remembered thinking—such strange beings are we—how very exactly the two shades of brown matched in the markings of his skin.

A moment passed thus; then suddenly there was a shout, and Tom Elverton crashing through the jungle, caught the snake by the throat and strangled it. Quiet as lightning it was done. Tom Elverton had not spent hours watching the native snake charmers for nothing; but, in spite of his dexterity, the snake was swifter even than he, and, twisting itself round in his hand, it bit him on the wrist ere it died.

"Oh, thank God!" cried Lena, beginning to tremble, now that the danger was over. "But it has bitten you, Mr. Elverton. Oh, what shall we do?"

"Never mind that," said Tom, looking at the creature now lying on the ground. "I don't believe it was a dangerous snake, at all. Anyway, you're not hurt, and that is the great thing. I dropped my stick coming back, else I could easily have knocked him over with that; but I might have struck you as well; so perhaps it was a good thing I hadn't it, after all."

Tom spoke lightly, but his face was visibly paling as he spoke. The pain was making him faint, and he leaned against the rock.

"Mr. Elverton," said Lena, timidly, "let me bind up your hand for you."

He held it out without a word, and Lena looked at the mark of the bite. "Are you quite sure it was not a poisonous snake?" she asked, falteringly.

"Well, perhaps not quite sure," he responded; "but I think not, Miss Lena."

She grew suddenly very red. "Do you remember the story about Queen Eleanor, Mr. Elverton?"

"Queen Eleanor?" he answered, wonderingly, looking into her tearful eyes. "I am afraid I am rather hazy in my history. "Oh," he abruptly broke off, you mean about the poisoned dagger?" And his face flushed as deeply as her own. "No, Miss Lena, that would never do, thank you. A man might allow his wife to risk her life for him, perhaps; but this is different. I am not Mr. MacAlpine, remember," he concluded, rather bitterly. "But if you will tie a handkerchief round my wrist, I shall be grateful to you for that; and then we must go down to our horses as fast as we can. I've found the road now, you'll be glad to hear."

"Tom," said Lena, in a very low voice, "if you will let me be your Queen Eleanor now, I'll—I'll be your wife afterwards."

There is no need to record Mr. Elverton's reply. But there is a lady now in the assistant's bungalow at Duemallow, and the appu who used to cheat his master in the most systematic and barefaced manner has fallen upon evil days, for he has to reckon with a stern mistress for every pound of sugar and measure of rice he brings from the bazaar. Consequently, Tom finds, to his great surprise, that he hardly spends any more money as a married man than he did as a bachelor; and his stores last out ever so much longer, now that "Queen Eleanor," as he calls his wife, keeps the godown keys.

In the centre of their cheerful drawing room, mounted on a handsome brass stand, there is a splendid stuffed specimen of the snake tribe, which Tom occasionally shows his visitors. "That fellow was the best friend ever I had," he says, "for through his help I got my wife."

Mr. MacAlpine is still unmarried; but it is supposed in the district that he was lately "indented home" for a young lady to come out; and Mrs. Tom Elverton is particularly anxious to know what she will be like. "Though, Tom, my dear," she says, "I shall never be too glad I learned sense in time, thanks to the snake."—Brown Paterson.

The Case Altered.

Husband—I am going to bring the young barrister home with me this evening.

Wife (with a bevy of marriageable daughters)—Very good!" (Rings the bell; the cook appears.) "Marie, we are having a visitor this evening; I shall be glad if you will prepare us a nice claret cup."

Husband—He is a most agreeable young fellow; a general favorite, in fact.

Wife (rings)—Marie, please make a few tarts as well.

Husband—I am told his young wife is just as nice and amiable as he is."

Wife (rings)—Marie, never mind the tarts and the claret cup; we shall only require some beer this evening.—Dorfbarbier.

Shaving by the Acre.

It is said that a gentleman residing in one of the large towns out West, whose face rather exceeded the ordinary dimensions, was waited on by a barber every day for twenty-one years without coming to a settlement. The barber, thinking it about time to settle, presented his bill, in which he charged so much a day—amounting in all to over $150. The gentleman, suspecting an overcharge, refused to pay the amount, but agreed to a proposal of the barber to pay at the rate of $1,000 an acre. The premiums were accordingly measured, and the result was that the shaving bill was increased to about $400.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

The Council met in regular session on Thursday evening. Present, President Drinker and members Yost, Wilson, Sterling and Knorr.

After reading and approving the minutes E. B. Tustin asked permission to straighten a crook in the street from Market to Centre by throwing out certain land and having the town also vacate a few feet for the same purpose. Provided Mr. Moyer raised no objection it was so ordered.

Col. Freeze, on behalf of Bloomsburg Cemetery Co., asked that the knoll on First street between Centre and Iron be cut down to accommodate the building of a new fence.

Charles Tittle presenting a similar matter to the Council, they were both referred to the Street Committee.

F. M. Kelley appeared in behalf of the Electric Light Co, and explained why an occasional light shed forth darkness. His explanation was satisfactory as he expressed a perfect willingness to remedy all defects that were reported to him punctually; and if the Council desired it the Company would light up their chamber free of charge.

The President here introduced several matters upon request of parties pertaining to paving, grading, filling &c.

Mr. Wilson cited some bad pavements on Market Street and intimated that they should be repaired.

Ordered on motion of Knorr and Sterling, that a car-load of crossing stone be purchased of C. C. Yorks at former rates, or cheaper if possible.

Building permits were granted to R. R, Little. W. H. Vanderherchen, W. J. Correll, and to Mr. McGee.

A communication from James Magee 2nd was read, stating certain facts about a run crossing his premises and alleging the impossibility for them to culvert it.

Ordered, that the collector be not allowed to cash orders; but that he be required to hand taxes collected to treasurer who is authorized to cash orders.

Messrs. C. C. Peacock, C. W. Miller, A. M. DeWitt, C. E. Welliver and John Newhouse, owners of land on West Second Street, handed in a communication offering to dedicate to the public a strip of land in front of their properties on North side of said Street adjoining J. E. Wilson, so as to make the line a continuation of the street as now laid out. And they agreed to put down a concrete pavement 4 feet wide in front of said properties if the Town will establish a grade and cobble the gutters, &c. Referred to Street Committee.

On motion ordered, that Mrs. Butler change crossing over private alley, throwing the water into the street and thus protecting the pavement; and said work to be done within ten days or town will do it with usual cost.

Ordered that special policemen during fair be allowed $1.25 each per night, making a total of $25.

The following bills were ordered paid:

Wesley Knorr, repairs of lockup	$2.00
P. G. Miller, for stone laid...	114.92
Water Co., for fire hydrants..	86.67
Woodward, Const. for Sept, Oct.	8.34

Electric Light Co., to Oct. 7..	1087.50
Peter Jones, plow beam.....	1.75
Water Co. for Town Hall....	2 81
Five policemen one mo.....	60.00
Secretary one month.....	20.00

Richart bill for repairs sent back to be itemized.

Bills for fire hose to be paid any time within one year.

Street Committee to confer with B. & S officials as to culvert under R. R. at Fifth Street.

What Next, Mrs. Kendal?

Mrs. Kendal's methods of housekeeping are worth hearing. In every room of her house hangs a pencil and slate. Once a day she makes a tour of the entire house. Wherever she finds anything wrong she writes her complaints and orders on the slate assigned to the particular room at fault. The housemaid follows in her mistress' wake, and if she has any replies to make, writes them also. This saves all jarring, and nothing is forgotten. As for the originality of the idea, who could have conceived it except a Mrs. Kendal?

WASHINGTON.

The President Says but Little While Thinking Much.--"United We Stand, Divided We Fall."--Chairman Faulkner Says the Stay-at-Home Vote Did it.--Mr. Morton Looming into Prominence.--Civil Service Law in the Way of the Willing.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, November 9, 1894.

President Cleveland is quietly attending to his official duties just as though there had never been such a thing as an election. He hasn't said a word on the subject to any one who had authority to make it public, but it is certain that he has been doing a lot of thinking, and those able to read between the lines will be able to form a pretty good idea of the trend of his thoughts when, in a few weeks, his annual message to Congress shall be made public. While he has said nothing publicly, his closest personal friends have left the impression upon those with whom they have talked that the President does not consider himself in any way responsible for the unexpected democratic defeat.

While few democrats of any prominence care to be personally quoted on the subject of the elections, every one with whom your correspondent has come in contact agrees that the greatest single source of democratic troubles has been the lack of harmony within the party, which was made so painfully apparent during the last session of Congress. The result of the election is merely an application of the proverb—"United we stand, divided we fall," and the lesson must be taken to heart and profited by if the party calculates to go into the campaign of '96 with a reasonable chance to win. "A house divided against itself must fall."

Senator Faulkner, Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign committee, rises from the wreck to say a few words, which are both explanatory and wise. He says: "The history of politics will show that every landslide is the result of dissatisfaction discontent and want of confidence of the members of the majority party, whose action produces the result that surprises and astonishes the people—not by voting the opposing ticket, but simply by remaining away from the polls. The results of this election when ascertained will, I am sure, verify this conclusion. We have as many voters in the country as we had in '92, who believe in the principles of the democratic party, but the recent business paralysis, financial stringency, economic legislation—the benefits of which have not been developed,—party dissentions, criminations and recriminations resulted in such apathy as to cause the stay-at-home vote to produce the surprising result. That is my honest judgment. If we hope for success in '96 we should maintain with fearlessness and determination the attitude we assumed in '92; let personal and party bickerings of the past bury their dead, and unite in an earnest effort to harmonize those differences which have so seriously affected our organization."

The returns from the elections were galling enough to democrats in Washington, but there was another thing connected therewith that was even more galling to democrats. That was, that some of the loudest cheers from the crowds which surrounded the newspaper bulletins with all the eagerness of a Presidential election, when the news was favorable to the republicans, came from the mouths of republicans who hold office under the democratic administration.

The friends of Reed, Harrison and McKinley are very much alarmed at the prominence of Morton as a Presidential candidate. They know that Tom Platt intended when he nominated Morton for governor of New York to push him for the Presidential nomination of his party, if he succeeded in getting him elected governor, and they know that Morton's barrel will be on tap at the next republican national convention, and they fear it.

The Washington democrats, who all belong to the never-say-die family, think they are playing in hard luck, indeed, this week. They stood up under the election returns with all the stoicism with which they have in the past received a long string of national defeats, comforting themselves with the reflection "we'll lick 'em next time," but they have heard something since that has caused not a few of them to use language not at all appropriate for an address to a Sunday School class. A few days ago a man born in Washington, and who has been a democrat all his life, was appointed postmaster, the term of the republican incumbent having expired. As he will be the first postmaster the local democrats have had since the war, it was perfectly natural that some of his democratic friends should entertain the hope of succeeding some of the numerous republican employes of the post office after the democratic post master takes hold, and just as natural that he should look forward with pleasure to appointing them. It may be imagined then how they felt when informed that a new order, filtered through the republican adjunct known as the civil service commission, limited the patronage of the postmaster to the appointment of about 10 men.

OUR PRESIDENTS.

Of the twenty three Presidents of the United States, fifteen or about two thirds, were college bred men.

This includes Grant, who was a West Pointer.

Those who never went to college were Washington, Jackson, Van Buren, Taylor, Fillmore, Lincoln, Johnson, and Cleveland.

Sir Richard Steele once said of Lady Elizabeth Hastings that "to love her was a liberal education." One would probably not be far wrong in saying the same thing about Washington's mother, Mary Washington. Washington learned better things from her than he could have learned from Harvard or Yale.

His successor at the White House, John Adams, was a Harvard man, and he graduated in 1755. He had been sent there with some intention of making him a minister, but, luckily for his country, he chose law and politics.

Jefferson was a graduate in the class of 1762 of William and Mary, a college in his day a flourishing institution of learning. Jefferson's father had declared on his deathbed that his son, then a boy, must receive a college education. Jefferson never forgot his father's solicitude on this point, saying in after life that if he had to choose between the estate his father left him and the education, he would have taken the latter without a moment's hesitation.

Jefferson, it may be added, did more for cause of education than any other American of his time. It has been said that he originated the modern university idea. The epitaph on his tombstone, which he himself wrote, recites that he was the author of the Declaration of Independence and "father of the University of Virginia."

Madison was graduated from Princeton 1772, where he also spent an additional, or post-graduate, year studying Hebrew.

Monroe, like Jefferson, went to William and Mary, but left before graduating to join the Revolutionary Army.

John Quincy Adams was a Harvard man. Of his own accord he left London, where he occupied the congenial position of Secretary to his father, in order to come to his native country to be educated, "deeming that an American education was the best fitting for an American career." He was graduated in 1788.

Jackson was taught only the three R's, and his attainments in even that limited field were said to be scanty. He never learned to write the English language correctly. His disciple and successor, Martin Van Buren, was too early immersed in law and politics to spare the time required for a college education.

William Henry Harrison was a graduate of Hampden Sidney college, in Virginia. He began the study of medicine, but left it for the Army.

Tyler was the third President to attend William and Mary, where he was graduated in 1807.

Polk entered the University of North Carolina as a sophomore, and was graduated in 1818.

Taylor entered the Army when he was 24, with only a rudimentary education gained.

Fillmore received practically no schooling in his boyhood. His father's library contained but two books—a Bible and a collection of hymns. Until he was 19 years old it is said that he had never a Shakespeare, "Robinson Crusoe," a history of the United States or even a map of this country. Yet he managed to acquire a knowledge of law, and the fact that Sir William Browne came to be one of his favorite authors shows how widely he must have extended his reading in after life.

Franklin Pierce was graduated from Bowdoin in 1824, third in the famous class which included Longfellow and Nathaniel Hawthorne among its members.

Buchanan was graduated from Dickinson College, in Pennsylvania, in 1809.

Lincoln, as everybody knows, was practically self taught. He once said that he had been brought up in so rude a country that "if a straggler supposed to understand Latin happened to sojourn in the neighborhood he was looked upon as a wizard."

Andrew Johnson was in some respects the most remarkable instance of a self-made man to be found in the list of the Presidents. He did not know how to write until he was married. Then his wife taught him. Not until he had been in Congress did he learn to write fluently.

Grant was graduated from West Point in 1843.

Hayes went to Kenyon College, Gambier, O., and was graduated in 1842. He then spent about two years at Harvard studying law.

Garfield went first to the Hiram Eclectic School (since renamed Hiram College,) in Hiram, Ohio. He then entered the Junior class at Williams, from which he was finally graduated, in 1856, with the highest honors.

Arthur was a graduate of Union College, in New York state, in the class of 1848. He afterward attended a law school at Ballston Spa., N. Y.

President Cleveland never went to College, and his knowledge of law he learned in a lawyer's office.

Ex-President Harrison got his law in the same way, but he is a graduate of Miami University, Ohio, where he took his degree in 1852.

It will be seen that three of the Presidents of the United States have gone to William and Mary—Jefferson. Monroe, (who left before graduating.) and Tyler. Three went to Harvard, both the Adamses being graduated from the college, and Hayes having been a student at the law School. Hayes, by the way, was the only President who attended any one of the more important American law Schools. There are many Presidents who were members of the bar, but they studied for admittance in lawyers' offices.

Complexion Of The Next Congress.

The latest figures on the complexion of the House show 245 Republicans chosen, 103 Democrats, seven Populists (four of the latter, from North Carolina, will co-operate with the Republicans) and one Silverite, showing a Republican majority over all of 134.

In the Senate the Republicans have gained three members in the States now represented by but one Senator—Montana, Wyoming, and Washington—two in North Carolina and one each in West Virginia, New Jersey and Kansas, which will give them in the next Congress 46 votes, a majority of two in a full Senate, and, besides, Mr. Peffer has generally acted with the Republicans.

Bequeathed His Pension.

Said B. C. Rains, a special pension agent; "I had a peculiar case in Washington county, Tenn. A man named Adams drew a pension for total disability, and I was instructed to call and see if the disability was still total. When I reached the house, a young man came to the door. I asked:

"Is this where John Adams lives?"

"It's whar he did live, stranger."

"Where does he live now?"

"He don't live. He's been dead for goin on five y'ar. I'm his son."

"Then I explained my mission, and he said:

"Oh, thet's all right. Walk right in an take a cheer. Pap could write, and he made a will. The pension war the only thing he had to leave, but it's cum in mighty handy."

"He produced the will, and, sure enough, the pension had been devised to him. I didn't have the heart to tell him that it was not valid, but he receives no more pension."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

WOMAN'S SENSITIVE ORGANISM

Does Not Permit Her to Do What Men Do, and She Ought Not To Try.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

You might as well know that you have a wonderfully sensitive and peculiar organism. You ought to know that from the moment the girl is changed into a woman, the matter of first physical importance to her is the regularity with which nature purifies her system. That all through life this is of the very first importance to her, and that neglect in this direction means misery in every direction.

Stop and reason out what happens when nature is balked in its efforts. The blood takes up the poisonous particles, carries them to the lungs, and decay follows. It carries them to the heart, and before long the organ is weakened, and your courage and strength vanish. It carries them to the brain, and before long the wildest fancies run riot, you think you have every known disease.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one remedy whose power over this killing disease is acknowledged throughout the world.

It destroys poisonous germs, cleanses the system, strengthens the womb, and makes a strong, hopeful, happy woman out of a physical wreck.

Mrs. J. A. Rice, of Florence, Ky., whose portrait we are permitted to publish, is only one of many thousands who owe their health to the Vegetable Compound, and are doing all they can to help other women to believe that the same health and happiness will come to them with the use of Mrs. Pinkham's medicines. She says:

"I suffered eight years from woman's early troubles. I could find no permanent relief until, one year ago, I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Relief then came with it almost immediately, and at this time I am a well woman.

"I absolutely know, not only by my own experience, but by others also, that it is a harmless and sure remedy for irregularities, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness of the stomach, sick headache, and female complaints generally.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1894.

Judge Holcomb, a "Fusionist," ran 3,000 ahead of Mr. Majors, the Republican candidate for Governor of Nebraska.

Gov. Pattison was inaugurated January 20, and will have served four years less five days at the close of his term. His successor, Governor Hastings will be inaugurated into office on the 15th of January. An imposing inaugural demonstration will likely take place.

Many faithful judges who were recognized as in every way competent were also covered out of sight by the political land slide; among them we mention Judge Rhone, of Luzerne and Sittser of Sullivan county. Alfred Darte succeeds the former and E. M. Dunham the latter.

And Coxey also failed to get there. The landslide slid over him also. The difference between his vote and that of Mr. Taylor, his Republican opponent, being something over 20,000 votes. We notice by the returns that the Populists didn't pop up as numerous as had been prophecied by those whose wish was a close relative to the thought.

Anticipating the failure of the income tax feature of the Wilson bill, that is the failure to success fully gather this tax from the rich, the issuance of bonds may become a necessity. While this is the case gathering tax from the poor is never permitted to fail. It is claimed by those who have observed past futile efforts to tax the rich directly that they will prefer to put the Government to expensive litigation rather than make proper return of their taxable incomes and then pay their tax as required by the income-tax law.

The fact being settled that the Republicans will reorganize the next House of Representatives, the all-important question now is how will they reorganize it? The struggle for speakership and chairmanships will now begin. In fact it has already begun with Mr. Reed of Maine, some distance in advance for speaker by virtue of his experience and his recognized leadership within the party. The reorganization of the Senate may not be required, since the Republicans have failed to gain a clean majority. If they have a majority here it will be through the aid of populists.

Some Plums.

While the change of a State administration does not carry with it so much patronage as a national revolution affects, there are still some plums to gather from among the executive State offices.

For instance the Governor's secretary commands a salary of $4,000; his deputy, $2,500; private secretary $2,500; chief clerk, $2,200; corporation clerk, $2,200; and the amount requisite for subordinate clerk hire, &c., is equal to about $150,000 more.

The Attorney General can easily see $11,000 ahead of him each year, while the law clerk and stenographer will absorb at least $3,700 more. The Adjutant General's salary, not counting little perquisites, is equivalent to $3,100 per annum and the patrons of this office require $15,200 more to pay them. There are of course some hold-over officials who are not yet bounceable, but no doubt the plums will fall and be gathered as fast as they ripen.

The Powerful Power.

These political revolutions are so highly indicative of the uncertainty of how the American political cat may jump that the betting fraternity are obliged to take the same risks as the politicians. We seem to have struck the time in our national existence when the floating vote holds the balance of power, and the powerful power buys the floating vote. In a similar revolution the Republican party and its protective policy was defeated by Democracy under a pledge of tariff reform. Now the tariff is reformed and Democracy is defeated because she lacked faith and was too long quarreling about reforming the tariff, &c.

Populist Growth in Wisconsin.

The Populist was the only one of the four parties that made any gain in Wisconsin. In this State the gain of the Populist party is estimated at 45,000, or about four times the vote it cast in 1892. The republicans, though victorious, polled fewer votes by several thousand than they cast in 1892.

THE OFFICIAL CONGRESSIONAL VOTE.

	Kulp.	Buckalew.	Curry.	Arms.
Columbia,	3243	3979	302	26
Montour	1198	1342	107	61
Northumberland,	7060	5286	565	133
Sullivan,	1176	1196	64	16
	12677	11783	1038	240

Kulp's plurality over Buckalew is 894.

We are indebted to D. R. Coffman, Congressional return Judge for this County, for the above figures.

An Analysis of the Vote.

The Singerly vote shows a gain of 32,963 on the Hancock vote of 297,966 last February, the Democrats polling 330,929 for the head of the ticket this year. The only other Democratic gain is in Clarion county, which gave Singerly 429 majority to 175 for Hancock. Grow had a total vote last February of 485,804 and a majority of 187,838, and this election receives 240,231 majority over Meyer, the highest of the Democratic candidates for Congressman-at Large. Huff has 9,259 less votes than Grow, and Collins has 7,600 less than Meyer. Hastings has 53,146 more majority than Grow received and the Republican vote is 86,109 higher than that cast last February, 55,902 greater than that given Harrison and 124,258 more than the Delamater vote. The Democratic loss on the Pattison vote is 133,280 and on that of Cleveland 121,335. Osburn had 23,827 less votes last November for State Treasurer than Singerly's vote this year and when Jackson had 135,146 majority. The total vote this year is 902,842. It was 968,275 in 1892 and 911,894 for Governor four years ago. Less than 73 per cent. of the vote given Cleveland was at the polls Tuesday, while the Republican gain is 90 per cent. over the Harrison majority.

Postmaster Kisner's Resignation.

The resignation of Elliot P. Kisner as postmaster in Hazleton has crented no little surprise in political circles in Luzerne county, and has given rise to endless rumors. Among these are that Mr. Kisner contemplates again entering politics actively. It is also stated that there is a plan now on foot to regenerate the Democracy in Pennsylvania, and that new leaders will be developed to take the reins. The theory advanced is to the effect that Mr. Kisner, Eckley B. Coxe, of Drifton, John T. Lenahan, of Wilkesbarre, and others are now formulating a plan by which this may be accomplished.

The hot fight between six applicants for the post office, which was abruptly ended by the appointment of Mr. Kisner, is again on. During the late campaign several of the disappointed candidates came out flat against Congressman Hines, and assisted materially in pilling up the majority for his opponent. From him these people now have little hope for assistance. The names more prominently mentioned as appointees are Chris Martin and James P. Gorman.—Phila. Times.

The Political Complexion of the Legislature.

There are 204 legislative districts in the State. In the next legislature, according to complete returns, the membership of the State senate will be made up of 7 Democrats and 43 Republicans; and the house will stand 27 Democrats and 177 Republicans, or a Republican majority of 186 on joint ballot. This is enough to put the responsibility for bad legislation on the Republicans.

Almost Blind

Inflamed Eyes and Running Sores

The Success of Hood's Causes Great Rejoicing—A Perfect Cure.

Miss Cora B. Ebert
Barnesville, Pa.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:
"I feel it a duty to state what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I was almost blind, being compelled to stay in a darkened room on account of inflammation of the eyes. I also suffered with running sores on my body. I was in terrible condition. My mother tried every thing she knew about and I was attended by two doctors but without helping me. Finally Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and I had not taken two bottles before I began to get better. The inflammation left my eyes and the sores healed, and the result was that and was restored to perfect health. At that time I was only twelve years old; now I am nineteen and I have not since been troubled with my eyes or noticed any sign of a return of the sores on my body. I can recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as an excellent blood purifying medicine." MISS CORA EBERT, Barnesville, Pa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Dr. Parkhurst, the Moral Crusader.

Once in awhile a genuine reformer receives the plaudits of the people before death overtakes him. A case in point is that of Dr. Parkhurst, the celebrated crusader aginst vice in New York, City. He has recently been given quite an ovation and is promised some befitting public demonstration before his death takes place and his monument is erected. Under the circumstances the demonstration is apt to be of a semi-political nature, and this perhaps accounts for it, since moralists generally allow moral reformers to die first for fear praise will spoil them perhaps.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS

Interesting Items From Various Points in the County, Reported by Our Staff of Correspondents.

CENTRAL.

I here relate you a few local news about our section.

The election passed off very quietly. Every ticket was counted as voted, which speaks well for the advance in our ability to vote correctly.

The weather is quite cold with about five inches of snow on top of the mountain.

Some few are hunting deer; among those who are said to have good luck was J. B. McHenry and his party from Benton. Well, the McHenry fellows most always have good luck. The Parvin Kile Hotel, located in the west branch of Fishingcreek, is headquarters for the hunters.

The hard times keeps C. E. Yorks quite busy handling the law for us fellows. In the suit of Frank Monroe and J. W. Perry it was adjourned for a further hearing. Mr. Perry giving bonds for his appearance.

This section is quite free from sickness and no one seems alarmed, as our resident physican can be relied on.

The tannery is running at Jamison City. Quite a number from Central have work at that place. The Pentecost Lumber Co., on the west branch, is also running on full lime. This company employs quite a large number of hands.

Messrs. Hummer and Yorks have taken a lay-off to take their usual hunt for deer. They are located on Elk Run, the famous trout stream.

Some few have changed moved into other houses,and all seem busy getting ready for the winter.

LIGHT STREET.

Mrs. Thompson and daughter, sister and niece of J. M. Hulshizer, were called here on account of sickness of the deceased; having reached here on Friday evening and his death occurred on Sunday.

E. D. Hagenbuch accompanied Mrs. J. M. Hulshizer to New Jersey.

Mrs. Isaiah Bower and lady friend, of Berwick, spent Tuesday in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Fredrick, of Scranton, are stopping with the latter's father, John Eckroth.

Mrs. Moats, of Woodward, Centre County, is visiting Mrs. Lillie Reighard.

Miss Allie Kester of Millville organized a Young Women's Christian Temperance Union here on Sunday night last.

At this writing our friend John Eckroth is still on the decline, now being confined to a sick bed.

John Shew has so far recovered from a recent sickness as to be able to be out.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Ent returned from New York, where they were taking instructions on the McDowell drafting machine.

BENTON.

Ira, J. B. and Pet McHenry were guuning on the mountains last week and killed two fine deer. They left Monday morning for an other hunt and when they return we expect to see as many more. If the deers are to be got, they generally get them, as they are classed in this section, as the bull dogs.

Dr. H. G. Colley, wife and son Fred of Lehman are visiting Jno. Heacock of this place.

Jamison City was well represented in Benton Saturday night. They do most of their trading at this place.

B. G. Keller is all smiles these times; it is a big boy, he has taken in a partner with him.

Orvil McHenry spent Sunday at Waller visiting his mother and sisters.

Alfred McHenry, our merchant is kept busy six days out of the week. He is our leading merchant at this place, and says he has not the time to talk business.

Any one in need of furniture give Ira McHenry a call. He has the largest stock on hand in the county north of Bloomsburg.

Rumors say J. G. McHenry of this place, expects to purchase the shoe factory at Orangeville.

Chas. Appleman expects to leave for Wilkes Barre in the near future, where he is going to be engaged painting ten dwelling houses.

Benton Milling Co. is doing a rushing business; their buckwheat flour seems to be superior to all others.

JERSEYTOWN.

Last Thursday morning made the people commence to think about getting their sleighs ready for use,

Mr. Harvey Henrie made a trip to Bloomsburg on last Wednesday.

Pascal Eves, of Millville, gave this town a pleasant call on last Thursday evening. Nothing like the Jerseytown girls.

Our wide awake merchant, Dan'l Laidacker and E. F. Welliver made a trip to Philadelphia last week.

Ottis M. Farnsworth and Wilber Runyan made a trip to Danville on last Wednesday afternoon.

It was quite a sight to see the Bloomsburg drummers rushing in town last Monday morning, showing their samples and taking orders such as was wanted in their line.

Mr. Harry and Miss Hannah Steveson, of Hughesville, Pa., gave John Converse a visit on Sunday last.

Three young men of Millville spent Sunday at this place; that's right, come again, boys.

About 3 o'clock on last Wednesday after-noon death comes in our midst and removes from us our old citizen, A. K. Smith, after a long illness of typhoid fever. Mr. Smith has lived at this place for many years, and he will be missed by many. He was a noble and generous man. Funeral took place on Saturday forenoon and the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at this place.

The Sufferings of Female Suffragists.

Western reports have it, now that females of their section have the right to vote, that they are too timid to fully enjoy the great privilege. Of 35,000 Chicago women who registered only about 8,000 mustered the courage to vote, and about 5,000 of these swore off for the future. We apprehend that to make female suffrage free from all suffering it will be necessary to give her special quarters or mark her booth "this apartment for ladies only," and then keep the men out with a club or something. Then by having special police to see that she gets out as sleek and clean as she gets in she may prove a great moral factor to her country while the baby squawls in its loneliness.

No matter how much silk was in the stockings they wore, or with what manly flourish of female trumpets they registered, when it came to entering the crowd and voting they quailed. The polls, as polls generally are, were painted more or less brown with tobacco juice and they lacked all parlor-like appearance in the eyes of the ladies. Besides the judges and clerks were found to be more hilarious than sedate. Then just what to do with the ballots after they got them in the presence of a gaping and anxious crowd of political bums and rounders had a tendency to further confuse the sovereign power in the female grasp, and in consequence many were marked wrongly and after all their trouble, rejected. Under certain conditions female suffrage may yet straighten up things in this country; but the conditions don't seem to be here yet.

THE BURIAL OF A CZAR.

At the funeral of the Czar of Russia, on the 11th, inst, at Moscow, an immense procession followed the remains. The body was blessed in front of the Iberian Chapel and solemn mass was celebrated in the Cathedral of the Archangel Michael, where the public were given an opportunity to view the remains. Thousands were busy all night putting the city in mourning for the late Czar, the streets in the morning presenting the appearance of a festive rather than a funeral occasion the, only distinguishing feature being the heavy folds of black drapery arranged upon walls and pillars here and there. There was a great and conglomerate mass of individuals, comprising the peasantry, the gentry, the tourist and the soldier, the like of which had not been seen since the coronation of Alexander III, some ten years ago.

It is said that no less than 10,000 men worked all night to complete the mourning drapery, and about 1,000 men were employed in paving with cobble stones the streets over which the corpse was to be carried. About two and a half miles of such pavement was laid by the peasantry. And then to muffle the clatter and noise that would arise from passing over it, thick layers of sand was scattered all along. The entire route was thus easily distinguished by the pavement and drapery.

The train with the body arrived at 10:40 o'clock. The successor, Czar Nicholas II, was saluted as soon as he alighted. He was accompanied by the Grand Duke Sergius, a number of the higher clergy, the Civil Governor and the Commandant, members of the court, the chief nobility down to the third class, the Mayor of Moscow and many other subordinate generals and officers.

The procession being formed in groops, the generals acted as pallbearers and carried the coffin to the temporary chapel, where the metropolitan read a brief service. From here the remains were taken slowly and solemnly to the funeral car in waiting.

Everything moved like clock-work, the firing of a cannon being the signals given. It the first fire the 180 classified groups formed and took place in the column, the whole procession comprising fifteen different divisions and no doubt given place according to caste or rank of nobility. The line of procession being thus formed, another signal started its slow and solemn march, amid the tolling of a thousand bells in the famous city of Moscow. When the chapel was reached the clergy stepped out bearing the miraculous picture of the Virgin, and with which they blessed the body.

The members of the imperial family gathered between the gorgeous pillars at the foot of the coffin and listened to the reading of the solemn mass for the dead, the service closing with music.

The imperial family and their attendants then retired within the Kremlin, while those holding tickets were admitted to the cathedral, where the body laid in state. Here they passed around the dais slowly, taking a last look at the dead Czar's face. After the nobility and gentry came people of all sorts and grades in the eyes of society, who were kindly admitted in the supposed order of their rank and blueness of their blood.

The body was watched day and night by six staff officers, twelve subalterns, and two special guards at each door. The spiritual repose of the Czar is cared for through frequent masses at appointed hours, and everybody, now that he is dead, is, welcomed to bid farewell to Alexander the III of Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 13th, 1894. This city was heavily draped in mourning to day long before the body of the dead Czar arrived from Moscow. The entire population inspected the extensive decorations. The line of procession here was over four miles long. A strong detachment of sailors formed the guard of honor. Sixty pages, all holding candles, assembled at the depot and awaited the arrival of the funeral train. The hearse in waiting was draped with gold cloth and silver tassels. The top of the hearse was surmounted by the imperial crown and ancient gilt helmets. The procession was divided into three sections and thirteen divisions, the hearse leading the section to the Winter Palace where the body was laid in repose.

Clarkson's Opinion of Lady Voters.

Having studied the activity of women in the campaign, he is led to remark:

"The highest-minded man however jealous or sheltering he may be of his wife, mother or daughter as against any rude touch of the world, could not have found any objection to what occurred at the polls in Colorado.

"The women cast a large majority of the votes in Denver, and the presence of a single good woman at a polling-place made the men there as quiet and respectable as at a threatre or church, and, regardless of her rank or station, the American woman is as much of a queen at the polls as in the drawing room, and as much deference is paid her."

FRUIT GROWING JOTTINGS.

The Proper Manner of Planting Out Fruit Trees.

"Line upon line, precept upon precept," says a Southern fruit grower, must be written regarding the proper manner of planting out fruit trees; not that there exists a great diversity of opinion, but because so little heed is paid to the plain teachings of nature and common sense. "The way father or grandfather did it," is authority for the majority, and they seek no further knowledge.

Now the world moves, and many new and valuable methods have been devised which insure the desired kind and quality of fruit, hasten maturity, and prevent decay. The non-progressive orchardist sells his fruit for a nominal figure, whenever he has any to sell, which is not often, and is continually complaining because his orchard "doesn't pay." It does pay for all the labor bestowed upon it, but it will not pay for what it does not receive.

Any kind of a fruit tree is an enormous feeder if it produces any amount of fruit. Who can reasonably expect to receive barrel upon barrel from any given tree, year after year, when nothing is fed to it? As well might the owner expect to work a week on the memory of a Sunday dinner.

Trees should be fed, therefore, and liberally, too, if large crops of fine fruit are expected from them.

The old-fashioned way of crowding trees in the space devoted to orchard purposes is still persisted in, notwithstanding the teachings of nature to the contrary. Trees are crowded in the rows like lodgers in a tenement house, and the results are as disastrous in one case as in the other. Trees, like human beings, need air and light. They must have these or their lives do not reach three score years and ten. Fruit will not grow in the shade, and it is beyond the power of any man to cause it to do so.

'Tis true, when trees are young, a proper space seems unreasonably large—there seems to be a waste, but there really is none. It is questionable if planting small crops, like strawberries, melons, tomatoes, etc., is advisable, even in the earlier stages of growth, and it certainly is not unless a liberal quantity of some proper fertilizer is applied. As the tree enlarges and reaches out its arm-like branches, it asks for more food; it also asks that God's sunlight may be permitted to kiss it from topmost branch to root, and unless this request is granted it shoots skyward, bearing no fruit except upon its highest branches, and becomes liable to be attacked by numerous diseases.

Who has not noticed that a tree, standing solitary and alone, always bears a liberal quantity of fruit? Who has not noticed that such trees are invariably healthy? Who has not remarked that if the entire orchard was like this or that solitary tree, there would be money in fruit-growing? Must so plain a lesson be unheeded? Can we not learn so simple a lesson without paying the immense price we do for tuition? The number of trees upon a given area does not determine the value of the orchard. If they are in excess of the proper number, they certainly are, comparatively, of little worth.

One argument used by those who favor close planting is that the shade thereby produced kills the grass and weeds which would steal the life-blood of the tree. This argument is born of pure laziness, and if carried into effect, as it too often is, the tree is deprived of its means of thrift, that its loafing owner may not blister his hands or burn his neck in his efforts to keep grass and weeds from choking his trees.

In raising fruit trees for profit, the following general principles should not be overlooked: 1. Effective drainage; 2. Thorough preparation; 3. Liberal fertilization; 4. Procuring best varieties; 5. Intelligent cultivation; and each will afford the owner a theme for constant study.

That fruit growing, as now practiced, is non-paying, we are ready to admit; that it may be made immensely profitable, we confidently assert. To attain this desired object something must be done besides blindly treading in the footsteps of old ways and expecting nature to perform impossibilities.

The whole Southern country can be made a vast fruit-field. Any and every man may literally "sit under his own vine and fig tree." Millions can be annually added to our material wealth. There need be no poverty in such a country, and there will be none in the near future, when our almost boundless resources are more fully developed.

Use Phosphates in the Fall.

The fall is an excellent period of the year for using prosphates, as they may be applied in the finely divided form particles, and slowly give off their particles, being available in the spring. If applied in the spring, however, the more soluble forms should be preferred. For all kinds of grain crops they show a marked effect, and may be applied on wheat land, in the fall, with benefit. None of the phosphates contain nitrogen or potash, except bones, which contain nitrogen, but no potash. It may be safely claimed that there is no crop grown that does not respond to the use of the phosphates, and they are more lasting in their effects on the soil than any other class of fertilizers.

A Good Fence.

Raise black walnut posts on the lot where they are wanted. If they grow fast they will do in from five to seven years. Use the barb wire. Black walnut injures crops less than almost any other tree. No stock will gnaw or hurt it. The roots run straight down, so you can plow against the trunk. It grows straight and tall, and has but few limbs. The working of the tree will not break the wire. Black walnut will pay all expenses in a few years in fruit.

Farmers' Accounts.

It would be a source of much satisfaction, and not cost much extra labor, to keep an account with each field, with each herd, with the orchard, the poultry, the stable and son on. Money received or expended can be as easily set down one place as another. There would then be fewer unprofitable crops, and less stock on which money was being wasted.

IN THE BOX OFFICE.

Three Charming Matinee Girls Manage to Buy Their Tickets.

There were three of them, and they came to the box office of the theatre just as the lobby was filling up for the matinee.

They put their heads together so that all three could look through the window at the abashed young man inside, and they began talking in concert: "We want three—some tickets for the matinee—good seats—not too far—best you have for—three seats together."

The young man waited until they quieted somewhat, and then he said: "You wish three tickets? We have some very good seats in the parquet."

"Oh, my! how much are they?"

"One-fifty each."

"Goodness me! Haven't you any dollar seats?" said the second.

"I should think they'd—if they're not too—had some one day that—depends on where," all three are going at the same time.

"We have some dollars seats in the circle," said the young man.

"That's back of the parquet, isn't it? We don't want to sit too far back."

"I should say we don't. Why, I think he might give us three seats down front for $3. The house won't be crowded this afternoon."

"They are very good seats," ventured the young man.

"Pshaw, it's so hard for me to make up my mind," said the woman who did most of the talking. "Let us see the diagram."

An impatient line was waiting behind them, but the young man in the box office produced the diagram.

He pointed out the $1 seats and the talkative one said she thought they'd do, but she would leave it to the second, and referred it to No. 3, who hadn't said very much, and remarked that anything would suit her.

"Well, now, you will give us three good ones, won't you?"

"Yes, ma'am; the best that we have."

"All right, then," continued the talkative one. "That will be $3."

"Hold on," exclaimed the second, "I'm not going to let you pay for these. No, I just won't do it. You paid the last time."

"You contrary thing, what difference does it make?"

"I won't let you, anyway. I've got the money somewhere."

Whereupon the two began a nervous fumbling for money. The second stuck a parcel under her arm, put her handkerchief in her mouth, opened a purse about fourteen inches long and began running her gloved fingers through the leather compartments.

The talkative one was rummaging desperately in a hand-bag, bringing out visiting cards, bottles, silk samples and almost everything except cash.

The young man had pushed out the three tickets and was thrumming impatiently with his fingers. Then the third woman, who had evinced no nervous anxiety to buy the tickets, slipped a $5 bill out of her glove and paid the bill.

"Oh, did you pay for those? That's too mean."

"I should say so. It was my turn. Did you get the tickets?"

"O-o-h, where's my parcels? Oh, yes, under my arm. Well, let's hurry in."

Then a man stepped up and clapped down a silver dollar. "One," said he, and he got it.

He was smiling and the young man asked: "Did you notice which of them paid for the tickets?"—Chicago Record.

Squire T.'s $100 Sandwich.

'Squire T—— was, in days of auld lang syne, a famous magnate in Bath, Maine, a man of great wealth, fond of good living, and a jovial society man. It is related by the Bath Independent that, on a certain festive occasion, a party of gentlemen, among whom was the 'Squire, got discussing their gustatorial capacities, when the 'Squire wagered that he could eat more than any other guest present, they to be judges. The bet was taken and all hands ate until they could eat no more the 'Squire apparently not being ahead in the gastronomical process. "Are you all done?" inquired the 'Squire. The rest admitted that they were, and claimed the 'Squire had not fulfilled his promise. The 'Squire pulled out his capacious pocket book, took therefrom a $100 note, and, placing the bill between two thin slices of buttered bread, devoured the costly sandwich. He won the bet.

She Took Time.

"Your offer is a great honor, Mr. Fritters," said the fair young girl, at whose feet he had laid his wealth of love in well-chosen but demonstrative words, "but it is so utterly unexpected that it takes me completely by surprise. I can't answer you now. You must give me time."

"Oh, I'll give you time," replied young Mr. Fritters, briskly, like the Chicago drummer that he was; you can have sixty days, or the usual 2 per cent. discount for——"

"Sir!" interrupted the astonished girl.

"Oh! I beg your pardon, Nell! Indeed I do. My mind wandered a trifle when you asked for time. I was dreaming of the bliss that awaited me when the dearest and loveliest and sweetest girl in the whole wide world had become my wife, I'll give you time darling! How much do you want? Won't two minues be enough?"

TAKEN UNAWARES.

Much attention has been attracted by the great offer of the Southern Pacific Company of New Orleans. They are making a free distribution of books to advertise their wonderful new train now running from New Orleans to the Pacific Coast, and which is said to be the finest, fastest and most luxuriously appointed train ever constructed. The train consists of a composite car, in which is embraced a barber shop, bath room, library, cafe and smoking parlor, a dining car, in which meals are served at all hours, day or night, passengers paying only for what they order; also, a full complement of Pullman's latest and most magnificent drawing-room sleeping cars. The speed of this railway wonder, covering the vast distance between New Orleans and Los Angeles in 60 hours, and to San Francisco in 77 hours, has never been attempted or equaled. Contrary to the usual practice of other great railway lines, no expense will be incurred other than the customary first-class ticket and sleeping-car fare for traveling on this superb train.

"Now westward Sol has sent the richest beams of moon's high glory."

And much of civilized America is following rapidly in his train, seeking homes, wealth and health in California.

The great Sunset Route, Southern Pacific, is now the favorite one to those familiar with the different lines of Western travel; and its management, gratefully recognizing the ready appreciation which the traveling public has shown their excellent fast-train service, embracing through Pullman and Tourist sleeping-car facilities in the past, and which will be continued from Cincinnati, Chicago and New Orleans, have determined to outdo the most splendid railway achievements, and to provide their patrons with a combination of luxury and comfort hitherto unequaled. To this end the magnificent train, "Sunset Limited," taking its name from the solar luminary, whose path across valley and plain and over hill and mountain it follows with the speed of the wind, has been put on between New Orleans, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Leaving both terminals every Thursday during the season of 1894-95, passing through the balmiest regions in all America, delightful even in January, this "fleeing city" covers gulf to coast in a trifle over two days. Every comfort of home is found in the luxurious vestibuled coaches—dining, sleeping and composite—which comprise "Sunset Limited," and the scenery along this line is unsurpassed. JAPAN SCORNS PEACEMAKERS.

Bound to Dictate Terms from Peking and Will Brook No Intervention from European Nations.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—The World correspondent called to day on Mr. Sonte, Japan's Minister to France, to inquire as to the truth of the repeated rumors regarding the intervention of the powers to enforce peace between China and Japan.

Mr. Sonte, still young, though he has gray hair, is a cultivated, polished gentleman, without any assumption of pride of office. He is a great admirer of America, has many American books in his library and is full of enthusiasm over the enterprise of the American press as illustrated by The World.

He told The World correspondent that there is no truth in the rumored peace negotiations.

"Japan, being victor," he said, "is not anxious to sue for peace. She will persevere in the war and will not rest until Chine is quite defeated.

"If China were to sue for peace, that would be a different matter. But China is untruthful. She is a liar, and cannot be trusted.

"Japan intends to dictate terms of peace from Peking. If the powers should intervene now Japan would not listen to them. The powers can do nothing."

The World correspondent suggested that China would not be conquered, even when Peking is taken.

"No," replied Mr. Sonte. "China is a great, powerful, wealthy country. It is impossible to conquer her; but the reigning dynasty would accept our terms if we were in Peking. The Emperor cannot fly south because he is unpopular there. He must remain in Peking."

The World correspondent asked if it is true that Japan intends to divide China into small separate kingdoms.

"No," answered the Minister. "Japan is interested in maintaining the present dynasty. If China were to be divided into separate small kingdoms they would become strong and unite. That would mean the awakening at China, would be a danger to Japan and a misfortune for the whole world."

"Is it true," The World correspondent inquired, "that Russia is concentrating troops on the Manchurian frontier so as to be ready to march into Corea?"

"Russia," Mr. Sonte observed, "may have a few troops there for purposes of a scientific survey, but for no other purpose. She often sends scientific expeditions and formerly even sent survey parties into Corea.

"The present Emperor of Russia, although wounded in Tokio in 1891, is well disposed towards Japan, has a strong affection for the Japanese people and is in turn very popular. He is a personal friend of mine and I have known him some time. He has a most amiable disposition, is very clever and highly educated, but his modesty is so great he kept himself in the background during his father's life.

"He will be a great Emperor. Under his reign Japan will not fear Russia.

"But China cannot be trusted," Mr. Sonte repeated, getting red with wrath. "China lies. It is because she lied to us ten years ago that we were compelled to make this war."

At the French Foreign Office The World correspondent could not obtain any definite statement, though what he was told is significant. The official who received the correspondent said:

"What can the powers do? They can bring diplomatic pressure to bear, but Japan would not fear that. So England sends a big fleet to those waters. How can France detach her fleet when the English fleet remains there?

"The two powers are watching each other. If France or England sent a few cruisers I should not be surprised if Japan defeated them.

"Japan to day is a great power and will not submit to dictation."

MAKING IT ALL RIGHT.

The man had a stub of whiskers on his chin which waggled when he talked, and kicked up their heels when he brought his jaws together.

"As I was sayin'," he remarked, "when I was out West I seen 'em hang a man to a telegraft pole fer stealin' a hoss."

"Whose hoss?" asked a person sitting on a molasses barrel.

"Nobuddy knowed."

"How'd they know he stole it?"

"They ketched him ridin' it."

"Mebbe it was his'n."

"P'raps."

"Did the owner ever claim the hoss?"

"Not that I ever heerd."

"Then it must a been his'n."

"P'haps."

"What become of it?"

"They hel' it three months fer the owner to claim it, and then they sold it fer $87."

"What became of the money?"

"Well, they spent it fer a monument to the man they hung. They thought mebbe they might a made a mistake, and they wanted to do the fair thing by the deceased."—Detroit Free Press.

Religion Parted Them, but Love Brought Them Together.

Glad They Made Up Again.

Frank P. Rollins, of Mountain Grove, and Mrs. Luella Rollins, his wife, sparked all over the station from 4 o'clock until the 'Frisco train pulled out, says the St. Louis Globe Democrat. He bought her popcorn and candy and lemonade, and then he would take her hand and squeeze it, and they would both smile sweetly at each other until Mr. Rollins could contain himself no longer, but just had to rush off and buy some more fruit or something as a relief to his feelings. And all of this after five years of matrimony!

It was not hard for a curious person to worm himself into the confidence of the happy couple—they were both only too eager to tell anybody all about it. He was a stalwart, handsome young farmer in jeans. Luella was clothed in a more sophisticated manner, having had the benefit of some six months of city experience.

"We've got a pretty nice farm down to Wright County," said Rollins, "and it'll be a sight nicer now we're going back to it. Won't it, Lu?"

"Yes, Frank, it will."

"And we've been getting along pretty well ever since we were married in 1889 up to last winter, when Lu she joined the Baptist Church, all our folks being Methodists, you know, altnough I ain't a professor myself. Well, you know how old folks is. There was Lu's ma and my ma and the rest of the women, and I guess I heerd more about infant baptism and 'mersion and falling from grace in about six weeks than would puzzle a Philadelphy lawyer. Lu she argued one way, and the other folks they argued the other, and I couldn't chip into the play without turning the whole pack of 'em onto me. I just got so every time they'd get to talking I'd sneak out into the barn, where I had a dimmyjohn hid out, and lay round there till I'd see the candles blown out.

"Well, one day I came home from Hartville and found a note from Lu, saying she couldn't stand it no more, and that she'd up and quit, and that none of us needn't never expect to see hide nor hair of her again. I was pretty near crazy, and I lit into both the old woman and sister Dosha, who'd been making her share of the trouble, too, and I got that house so trimmed up that I ain't heerd a chirp about faith or works from that day twell now. The women were skeered any how, and sorry, too, for Lu was mighty popular with 'em outside of church matters. And then I set out to hunt Lu. I tracked her to Memphis, and there I lost her. That was in April. Well, I've been to Louisville on a false scent, and I've been to Vicksburg and Little Rock. Last week a neighbor met up with Lu right on the street here and talked with her, and she said she'd come back if I'd come after her. Well, maybe I didn't come a-running, didn't I, Lu? And what's more, stranger, she has the consent of the whole family to believe what she dumb pleases from now on. You see, she done give us the worst scare any one of the family ever got."

"But how did you get along in the meantime?" the wife was asked.

"I had a pretty hard time, but I'd a stayed away till I died before I'd a given in," Mrs. Rollins replied. "I had about $100 that I'd saved up, and I came direct from Memphis here. Then I went and saw a clergy man, whose name I knew, and he got me work with one of the families in the church. I tell you it was hard work, though, and I was lonesome for Frank all the time. But it's all over now, and I'm goin' home to stay."

"You bet your life you are, honey," said Frank, "or if you have to run again we'll just run away together."

"Trust those who have tried."

BEING GRADUALLY EXHAUSTED.

Coal and Population--Where to Get the One and Put the Other in the Future--Vast Population of the United States--Fertile Territory of Manitoba.

It is quite true that the temperate regions of the world are becoming more populous, just as it is equally true that the stock of coal in the world is being gradually exhausted. The coal supplies of the United Kingdom are, for all practical purposes, much larger than they were 50 years ago, when a great geologist persuaded a great minister to stave off a prospective danger by imposing an export duty on coal.

Since that time new coal fields have been discovered, new mines have been opened, old mines have been worked at depths which would have been declared impracticable then, and the stock of available coal, though hundreds of millions of tons have been consumed in the interval, is actually larger than it was at the commencement of the present reign. Just the same thing may be said of the great countries in the western and southern hemispheres, which are becoming the new homes of the Teutonic race.

Almost every new trade route, almost every new colonial railway, has opened out fresh territory to the colonist, and the land available for colonization, instead of becoming less, is, for all practical purposes, greater than it was 50 years ago. True that in the United States most of the land has already been appropriated, while the population has increased till it has doubled that of Great Britain. But vast as is the population of the United States, they would easily sustain, if they were peopled as England is peopled, 20 times their present numbers.

The Anglo Saxon race might go on multiplying at its present rate for 250 years, and might pour the whole addition to its numbers into the United States, and, at the end of that period, they would not be more thickly peopled than the Netherlands are now. The states, however, are only one of the countries which are available for European colonists. How thick stand their numbers on the fertile territory of Manitoba, or on the still larger and undeveloped regions which may be vaguely included in the term Northwestern America! How little do we still know of our great Australasian territory, and how much of it still remains available for appropriation in the coming centuries!—Edinburgh Review.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the gentler sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one Magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

GENERAL NEWS.

Hinton G. Lee, a traveling agent of Williamsport, recently yielded to the strong temptations of Wall Street and foolishly invested his employer's money and of course lost it. The strong hand of the law is now bearing down hard upon Hinton in consequence. His employer gave him in trust $650 to be invested otherwise, but Hinton overlooked instructions in his anxiety to get rich quick.

Eighth Page Essays.

NO. 1.

Well! the play is played out, the curtain has been rung down, the prompter has closed his book, the players have left the stage, and the lights are out. This is a good time to take account of stock, to look up the dead, wounded and missing, and to prepare for the battle of 1896. Lest something should be forgotten which ought to be remembered, we propose to put on record in these Essays facts for our party friends which may be useful in the coming contests.

Ex-Secretary Whitney is one of the shrewdest political observers in the country. He says:

It does not require a seer to see that the causes of yesterday's results were both general and special. It is a repetition, to my mind, of 1874, with the parties reversed. The panic of 1873 resulted in the great Democratic tidal wave of 1874, and the hard times of 1893 and 1894 have resulted in this great Republican victory.

That is the great underlying general cause, but along with it is the fact that the Democratic party has misbehaved since 1892, and disgusted large bodies of its friends and supporters. That fact has been perfectly evident to everybody. When people are poor and hungry they actually are against the Government, and the party in power gets the blame of it.

A great many who have loyally supported the party this time will rather rejoice at the thoroughness and completeness of the whipping. If it was to be, they would rather have the lesson written out strong enough not to be mistaken. I do not think it is a verdict against the party or its principles. The Republicans will say so, and it will take a long time to get over it, but the Democratic party has had four times as many defeats as victories since I have been a voter, and it does not demoralize easily. It will be stronger in the end.

The Reading Morning Herald has this to say of the political result last week as compared with that of 1890, and the then overthrow of the Republicans.

"The Democratic defeat in the country on Tuesday is not unprecedented. It is closely paralleled by the great landslide against the Republicans in the second year of President Harrison's term.

"In the fifty-first Congress the Republicans had a working majority in the House. In the elections of 1890 this was converted into a Democratic majority of about one hundred and fifty. As far as the new tariff was involved in the elections the condemnation of the McKinley law was far more emphatic than is the disapproval of the Democratic measure.

"The reversal of the State elections was quite general in 1890 if not so pronounced as it has been this year. Pennsylvania the rock-ribbed Republican State which gave Harrison 70,000 majority in 1888, elected a Democratic Governor by 16,000 in 1890. Illinois, which gave Harrison a majority of 22,000, elected a Democratic Treasurer by 10,000 in 1890. Massachusetts, which had been Republican with only two exceptions for thirty years, and which gave Harrison a majority of 32,000, elected a Democratic Governor two years later by over 9,000 majority. Michigan, Nebraska, Oregon and Wisconsin, all Republican States, went with the avalanche for the Democrats in the middle of Harrison's term.

"If Wilson, the champion of Democratic Tariff Reform in the House, is defeated this year, was not McKinley beaten in 1890?

"A political reverse in the middle of the administrative term has been the rule in our history. No President since the end of the war and reconstruction period has carried a party majority in Congress through his term.

"There is discipline in the Democratic defeat, but it is neither unprecedented nor final. The Republicans have rope enough to hang themselves, and their record indicates that they will do it before 1896."

Just for the Honor of It.

There are a number of applicants in Harrisburg for positions on the military staff of Governor-elect Hastings. The position in demand is that of lieutenant colonel, with nothing to do and plenty of gold lace and brass buttons. There are eleven lieutenant colonels on the staff. The position pays nothing except for service during camp. These officers must buy their own equipments and bear their own expenses when accompanying the governor to receptions, parades, &c. It costs on an average of $500 a year for the honor of serving as an aide-de-camp on the staff of a Pennsylvania governor.

Resigned.

Another attempt to resign his pastorate was made by Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage on the 5th instant It is said he does not care to ask his old congregation to build the Fourth church for him, and that he prefers either a new pastorate or Evangelistic work in the future. It looks as though this resignation would be accepted by the board of managers.

Did you ever see one of the famous waterproof Interlined Collars or Cuffs? It's very easy to tell, for they are all marked this way

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

They are the only Interlined Collars and Cuffs, and are made of linen, covered with waterproof "CELLULOID." They'll stand right by you day in and day out, and they are all marked this way

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

The first cost is the only cost, for they keep clean a long time, and when soiled you can clean them in a minute by simply wiping off with a wet cloth—that is the kind marked this way

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

These collars and cuffs will outlast six linen ones. The wearer escapes laundry trials and laundry bills—no chafed neck and no wilting down if you get a collar marked this way

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Ask your dealer first, and take nothing that has not above trade mark, if you desire perfect satisfaction. All others are imitations absolutely.

If you can't find collars or cuffs marked this way, we will send you a sample postpaid on receipt of price. Collars, 25 cts. each. Cuffs 50 cts. pair. Give your size and say whether stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted.

Not Without Hope.

Though defeated, Democracy will again come up smiling. She has fought too good and effective a fight against herself and her enemies to be dismayed in the face of the apparent beneficial results of her equitable legislation. Her equitable legislation is not in dispute nor nullified by defeat; nor can her defeat be based upon it. This the popular sentiment of the country will yet recognize and approve as heartily as it sought reform by and through the elevation of the party into power. Nor will her political opponents be swiff in their attempt to undo her tariff legislation. And why? Surely not because the protection of all manner of trusts, combines and monopolies will be less desirable with them, but because they know it will be impolitic to attempt it. There will be no change of issue, so far as Democracy is concerned. Her aim will continue to be along the line of further tariff reduction while the Republican party, elated over temporary success, will continue to champion the cause of the money power of America upon the tariff and every other issue that may arise. This being the attitude, in times of ordinary prosperity Democratic opportunities, we hold, will be worth more to the country and to the individual aspirant than Republican hope of continued favor.

It was upon the promise of tariff reform that Democracy swept Republicans overboard quite as disastrously as she now finds herself submerged through popular disgust at her failure to harmonize and to punctually fulfil her ante election promises. The President was almost alone in the honest effort, and in consequence disastrous political, commercial, and business depression wrought out the inglorious defeat leaving Hill, Gorman & Co., to gather what consolation they can from the temporary rebuke of the sovereign power.

The internal strife within the party and at the very seat of Government reached out in all directions and entering the halls of legislation, State and National it was an ominous percursor of party demoralization that headed directly for tha inglorious revolution that followed in consequence. And yet the unterrified are not without hope for the future by any means. We are fast becoming acquainted with political "landslides," "slumps," &c., that are based upon the real or imaginary ailments of the sovereign voters, many of whom while they can neither read or write are got quite able to feel distress when it strike them.

Business Depression.

If Democratic ascendancy has been responsible for business depression it is just as well, perhaps that Republicans are again partially permitted to share the responsibility by regaining control of the lower House of Congress, as they no doubt have done through the last election. We fancy, however, that strikes so common under the Republican regime will still be heard of, and that the same old warfare between capital and labor will still be waged.

Fashionable Livery.

The well known horseman has opened a fashionable livery in connection with his boarding stable at the Exchange Hotel Stables, where fine turnouts can be obtained, single or double. He has well broken and safe saddle and driving horses for ladies, all at reasonable rates. Orders left at the Exchange Hotel will receive prompt attention. Drivers furnished when desired.

STATE GAME COMMISSION.

An Important Measure to be Presented to the Next Legislature.

The legislative committee of the State Sportsmen association, met in Harrisburg on the 8th inst. to discuss game, fish and bounty legislation. It was agreed to present bills to the next legislature providing for the establishment of a game commission to consist of six members to be appointed by the governor; the commissioners to serve without compensation other than their actual and necessary traveling expenses which are incurred in the performance of their official work. The commission is to appoint ten game wardens to be paid each $500 a year to see that the laws relating to game birds, quadrupeds and insectiverous birds are enforced.

The wardens are to work under the direction of the secretary of the commission, who will be chief game protector with a salary of $900 a year and have an office in this city. For the entire expenses of the work of the commission an appropriation of $15,000 will be asked for two years.

The association also decided to leave the present game laws remain as they are, except as to woodcock and squirrels, which shall be killed only after October 1 to December 31. At present woodcock can be taken from July 4 to December 31 and squirrels from September 1 to December 31. It was also decided to urge the passage of a scalp bounty act as follows: Wild cat, $3; weasel, 25 cents; mink, 25 cents; cooper's hawk, 25 cents; sharp shinned hawk, 25 cents; duck hawk, 25 cents; barred owl, 25 cents; great horned owl, 25 cents.

The Man In the Moon

sees all that's going on on the earth. He's getting old now, but astronomers assert he keeps things in view by means of modern glasses. If you can't see as well as you used to, come in and let us help you. We have all the facilities for testing the eyes properly for glasses, etc. at J. G. WELLS.'

Another point—The earth looks pleasanter to the man in the moon since he put on glasses, and it will to you, too, if you cannot see perfectly. Come in and have your eyes tested. No charge for that, and it may save you trouble, expense; indeed, eyesight in the end, by taking care of your eyes.

Another fact—It's not all Moonshine that only the old should wear glasses. Children and young people frequently have defective eyes. The remedy is near at hand at
